

Forerunners for Christ Los Angeles

Christ’s Ekklesia

When Jesus showed up on the fallen world scene, He left no doubt as to His ownership of it:

- He demonstrated authority over the laws of nature by walking on water (Matthew 14:25).
- He controlled the forces of nature, altering weather patterns (Mark 4:39).
- He trumped the laws of physics, multiplying food, turning water into wine, translating His physical body from one place to another, and destroying trees simply by speaking to them (Matthew 15:36; John 2:9; 6:21; Mark 11:13-14, 20).
- He demonstrated authority over the animal world, using a fish to collect the money needed for a tax (Matthew 17:27).
- He had dominion over disease, healing multitudes (Acts 10:38).
- He even displayed power over death, bringing dead people back to life (John 11:43-44).

In a plan so daring, bold, and staggering in its ramifications that no one could even guess what it was—including Satan’s kingdom and even the angels—God had become an Adam (a Hebrew word meaning “man”). In doing so, He was legally qualified to redeem humankind and win back their lost authority for them. Ownership of the earth wasn’t the issue, nor was Christ’s personal authority—He had never lost His, here or anywhere else. The issue at hand was authority for the human race - whether or not they would regain their forfeited governmental rights to earth.
