End Time Messengers by Jeremiah Johnson

I want to encourage people today who know God has called you in this generation, but you are afraid. Afraid of what others will think of your pour. Fearful that you will be falsely accused of doing it for all the wrong reasons. Concerned that if you lift up your voice, your friends will call you prideful and become jealous of the anointing on your life.

The truth is that God knows your heart. The truth is that your gifting and grace will never mature and grow unless you step out in faith and start exercising it! False humility and burying your talents doesn’t please God. Shouting from the sidelines in the greatest era in history is far from your mandate. It’s time to start laboring in the harvest fields and give the Lamb the full reward of His suffering! You were born for intimacy with God and to lift up your voice for those who can’t.

Some of us need to stop despising our youth. Others of us need to overcome condemnation because we made mistakes, and it has taken us years to get back to the place where we are ready now. Many of us must choose to not let the poor stewardship that we have watched others operate in and fail keep us from saying, “yes” to God and learning how to flow the right way. Their stumbling blocks will become your steppingstones. It’s called, “wisdom”.

I exhort and admonish you today my brothers and sisters that the hour is late in the earth. We must have end time messengers lifting up their voices in every sphere of society. Your microphone is wherever God has placed you. Start at home and expand from there. The need has never been greater!
